Dear Sir:

Herewith I am sending you an invitation to the opening of our recently enlarged Museum. We are planning to have the representatives of the press here on Wednesday afternoon and if that should be a more convenient time for you to come, I hope you will feel that we should be glad to see you then. It seems to me that our Museum and its collections would have an interest for a number of readers of your paper (which I personally enjoy reading very much), and when you are here if you care to make use of some photographs of the building which we have we should be very glad to place them at your disposal. Please ask for me personally if you are able to come as I should be glad to meet you and have you know something more about our collections than those which are on public exhibition.

Very truly yours,

Secretary.
